A significant ruling was reversed in the court yesterday, which was a victory for the workers at the brewery.

The brewery's union, the Cambodian Labour Rights Forum (CLRF), announced that they had won a fight against the beer company, Cambodia Beer Industry (CBI), over unpaid overtime and other labor rights.

CLRF President Sok Khieng said that the workers had been working without proper payment for overtime for several years, and the ruling was a significant victory for the workers.

The ruling was reversed after a long legal battle, and the workers are now entitled to backpay and other benefits.

The brewery is expected to appeal the ruling, but the workers are hopeful that it will be upheld.

The workers have been on strike for several months, demanding better working conditions and fair wages.

The ruling is a significant win for labor rights in Cambodia, and it is hoped that it will set a precedent for other workers to fight for their rights.

The workers have been granted permission to continue their strike, and they are now preparing to continue their fight for better working conditions and wages.
